

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

BOOK REVIEWS.

A SELECTION OF CASES ON THE LAW OF INSURANCE. By Edwin H. Woodruff, Professor of Law in the College of Law, Cornell University. New York: Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1900. Canvas, pp. 592.

This latest series of cases by Prof. Woodruff adds its evidence to the increasing interest in and importance of the law of insurance, meeting, as it does, a demand on the part of the profession and on the part of the law schools, in the latter of which it is receiving greater attention than heretofore was deemed necessary. The conventional preface is omitted. The analysis of the subject commends itself for its logical sequence, the division being into nine parts amplified by nearly 400 cases, adequately illustrative of the law developed to date. One notes with a sense of satisfaction that the paper used is of a better grade than is used in the general run of law books, and this, taken in connection with good letterpress, has resulted, from the mechanical point of view, also, in an attractive edition.

ABBOTT'S TRIAL EVIDENCE. By Austin Abbott, LL.D. Second Edition by John J. Crawford of the New York Bar. New York: Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1900.

Abbott's Rules of Evidence, applicable on the trial of civil actions, at common law, in equity, and under the code of procedure, after twenty years of unprecedented popularity among young practitioners and students, as well as being a recognized authority by the older members of both bar and bench, has been revised and enlarged by John J. Crawford of the New York Bar and is receiving a more hearty reception by the legal profession than ever. It has been well said to be "a whole library of the rules of evidence upon every question likely to arise upon a trial," for it gives the rules for both prosecution and defense. The second edition is revised, enlarged, up to date, and being concerned with the proper application of the general principles of the law of evidence it is an indispensable addition to the library of every lawyer or law student in the United States.

COLLIER ON EVIDENCE. Third Edition. By James W. Eaton. Albany: Matthew Bender. 1 vol., pp. 866.

The popularity of this work is shown by the fact that this is the third edition issued since 1898. The author's treatment of the subject in this revised and enlarged edition is comprehensive, including the official forms as just promulgated by the Supreme Court, the rules and orders prescribed by the same Court, the statutes of 1800, 1841, 1867 and 1898, the exemption laws of the States, the United States equity rules, and citation of all authorities to date, with comment upon them. It should prove much more useful to members of the profession than previous editions.

SOHM'S INSTITUTES OF ROMAN LAW. Second edition. The Clarendon Press, London and New York.

Sohm's Institutes has been too long before the public and too favorably known to invite much comment. It has already become one of the standard works on Roman law. The fact that the present edition is the second in Eng-